Kandice’s story about these Aliens:

Beyond the starry universe we know, there are worlds where color, patterns and light are not like ours. There is life out there far away from us. We are not the only ones in the cosmos. Although the other life forms do not look like us, they are the same, but different, human-like, but in-human. They are among us right now. Their extraordinary intelligence, supernatural powers and extra sensory perception can read our minds, see the past, and tell the future, just as we could or should if only we’d believe. Who are they? Where are they? Are they here? Are they out there? Years from now humans will leave our planet and go to another solar system searching for life forms on distant planets. They will find an alien species and mate with them to create another life form. They are visiting the earth even now by going back in time. This advanced half-human half-alien, has developed powers well surpassing our intelligence and even the aliens.

Aliens...The year is 2209 and humans finally made contact with beings from another planet, in a galaxy far far away. After following a signal found by scientists and astrophysicists, they located the planet Zeron. The earth had finally exhausted its natural resources in the year 2150 and space exploration was given the utmost priority. In 2208 a spacecraft filled with dozens of volunteers from all over the world was sent on one last and desperate mission; to find the signal and those who were sending it. These hopeful immigrants were the last chance for a dying planet. It took the spacecraft almost a year to reach the planet Zeron and when they finally arrived they were much surprised to find a paradise beyond their imagination. The primary beings on the planet had many similarities to the Earthlings. Their body shapes were alike, but they had no hair and their skin had a metallic sheen to it. Some had antennas on their heads and seemed to have a more important status than those without. Their intelligence was far superior to the Earthlings, yet they were peaceful and friendly. Zeron was run primarily by the women of the planet and it was they who made most of the decisions concerning the planet's welfare. Zeron men were physically strong and their primary duty was designing and constructing the buildings, communication equipment and spacecraft. There had not been any wars or crime on Zeron for thousands of years. The Zerons communicated easily with the immigrants in their own national languages, and were able to read their minds. They brought the Earthlings to their main city; a huge and complex arrangement of buildings constructed from something that resembled jade or marble. The city overlooked a lush valley filled with an amazing array of animals which the Earthlings had only seen in history books. It seemed unreal, but the animals were those seen on the earth and thought to have been extinct hundreds and even thousands of years before. They were escorted to a small spacecraft where the Zerons took them to see jungles, lakes, rivers and deserts filled with more exotic and extinct plants and animals. Among them were saber-tooth tigers, mastodons, and dodo birds. Afterwards they flew over a snow capped mountain range to a lush valley covered with wildflowers. There they saw a spectacle that was so awesome they thought they were imagining it or that the Zerons were playing a trick on them. Before them was a herd of Unicorns; their magical horns shining and luminous. They were basking in the sun, a sun as brilliant as that of the solar system on the earth. On a nearby hilltop they saw a magnificent Pegasus surveying the kingdom below, its huge wings flapping in the wind.

The Zerons explained as they showed their guests that they had been watching the earth for thousands of years and had seen how many species were becoming extinct. They also had a love of plants and animals which were not native to their planet. Foreseeing the future of the earth, they brought the animals to Zeron to preserve them before they vanished.

And so, after finding this paradise the Earthlings choose not to return to the earth or to have any further contact. They knew the other Earthlings would spoil Zeron and its inhabitants like they had their own planet. The Earthlings and the Zerons became united in all ways and decades passed with many unions between the two different creatures. In this way a new species of half Earthling, half Zeron developed which had powers well surpassing both of their races. Between them they created a sophisticated way of time travel and were able to go back in time and save even more of the extinct animals on the earth and bring them to Zeron.

Perhaps they are visiting us on the earth even now...
