Feathers used are the natural color, not dyed. No birds were harmed to create these Bird Goddess Figurines. Birds naturally shed their feathers and they can be collected naturally. These feathers come from the happy homes of individuals who rescue abandoned or homeless birds on the Big Island of Hawaii. It's a place where they get the best of care and nutritious food, which makes their feathers even brighter and healthier.

Photo #1 - Altariel - Hawaiian Fire Bird Goddess Bird Goddesses love sparkly things and they adorn themselves the way humans wear their own jewels. Altariel loves to watch erupting volcanoes and watch the molten lava spray into the sky. Feathers used: Hyacinth Macaw, Male Eclectus, Amazon, Scarlet Macaw & Crimson Wing Parrot -10” high x 18” wide - $399.

Photo #3 - Rhovanni - Scandinavian Moonbird. These Bird Goddesses are seen mostly in the springtime in Scandinavia. They sing sweet canary-like songs to their babies in the nest. They are sometimes heard singing at night during the full moon. Feathers used: Cockatiel and Cockatoo -10" high x 25" wide - $399.

The Bird Goddess Story;

You hear a flutter of wings, look up into the trees, but no bird will be seen. Larger than a sparrow, smaller than a hawk, almost human, but not. Half-bird, half-woman. Wings like a bird, feathered wings, allowing her to fly on her errands, secret missions in her forest. No human clothes does she wear, but glorious colorful feathers. She is Goddess of the Trees and Guardian of the Sacred Forest. The sky, the wind and the trees are her friends. Only they know she is there, so silent and secretive is she. You might see her gliding on the wind or flying through the forest to a nest-like home among the branches and leaves. She gathers fruits and nuts for nourishment then takes them to her cache, hidden in the tallest of trees. A fantastic curiosity, mysterious and beautiful; Bird Goddess.

About the wood

The wood used for these sculptures is collected from the 10 acre Enchanted Forest, the home of Enchanted Fantasies. This forest is high on the mountain top of the southern part of the Big Island of Hawaii in the Kahuku mountain range. All of the wood comes from the roots of Ohia Lehua trees (an indigenous tree of Hawaii) which have fallen down naturally or were pushed down when the roads in the area were made over 60 years ago. The root wood is extremely strong and was chosen for its unique and interesting shape and size. The wood has been naturally weathered and bleached by many years of sun and rain.

About the feathers

No birds are harmed to create these sculptures. Birds naturally shed their feathers and they can be collected naturally. Cruelty free sources are important. Almost all of the feathers come from the happy homes of individuals who rescue abandoned or homeless birds and other animals such as Starfire Companion Animal Sanctuary and Parrots In Paradise. These birds live in a beautiful tropical home on the Big Island of Hawaii. They are places where they get the best of care and nutritious food, which makes their feathers ever brighter and healthier. Feathers used are the natural color, not dyed.
